TIME: 2 Hours

QUESTION ONE

We all understand the costs both monetary and otherwise that a poor hire can have on our business. For small businesses, this impact can be detrimental as an inappropriate hire can have an immeasurable effect on your existing team and ultimately your bottom line results. Importantly, you also need a process that ensures that your new recruit understands the business and the job, feels valued and is able to perform well and meets his or her potential. It might include, for example, meetings with the line manager, any direct reports, being shown around the building and being given information about any health and safety issues that are relevant. When engaging in a new hire an employment contract ensues and in most cases termination of the contract is often overlooked. It is important to plan for what happens when the employment relationship turns sour and an employer needs to terminate an employment. It is vital for employers to follow the proper legal procedures when engaging and terminating employment contracts to avoid legal tussles. Issues to do with gender should not be overlooked. Promoting decent and productive employment and income opportunities equally for women and men is one of the key priorities of the ILO's Decent Work Agenda. Integrating gender concerns into employment promotion can contribute to more effective boosting of productivity and economic growth.

- a) Despite some progress made over the last few decades in increasing women's labor force participation and narrowing gender gaps, gender equality in the world of work still remains an elusive goal. Clarify how gender diversity can be increased via altering hiring practices (12 marks)
- b) Importantly, you need a process that ensures that your new recruit understands the business and the job, feels valued, and is able to perform well and meets his or her potential. Highlight contents of such a program (10 marks)
- c) Evaluate ways through which an employer can bring to an end an employment contract when the relationship between the employer and the employee is no longer tenable. (8 marks)
